EXPERIMENT... WITH READING!

There's an electrifying summer ahead filled with examining new books, observing fun topics, and investigating thrilling subjects as 2014 Summer Reading kicks off with the "Fizz, Boom, Read!" theme for kids (through fifth grade) and "Spark a Reaction" theme for teens (sixth grade through college freshman).

Children can use the Summer Reading website to log the books they've read and check out what other kids are reading. Teens can record game board activities, log books they've read, and track programs they've attended. Participants can also get great book recommendations from FCPL and Frederick County Schools.

Kids and teens will be eligible for exciting prizes, including a trip to Great Wolf Lodge, Kindle Fire eReaders, movie theater tickets, gift cards, and more. There are also fun programs such as Awesome Animals and Gardening on the Terrace. All of this is just a sampling of what Summer Reading participants can look forward to over the next few months.

As always, Summer Reading and all related activities and events are free. Register online at fcpl.org/summer or at any FCPL branch.

☀ Look for this icon in the program listings (pages 13–19) for details on Summer Reading events.

THINK WITH BINK BRIGHT IDEAS NEED KNOWLEDGE

Join Frederick County Public Libraries, the Fort Detrick Alliance, and BINK the Robot for more STEM-related programs led by local scientists. Programs are designed to inspire elementary age children to pursue education and careers in science, technology, engineering, and math.

Jim Swearingen, DVM, Board of Directors of the Fort Detrick Alliance, says, "I feel strongly that these types of interactions are vital in establishing scientific curiosity and the feeling of accomplishment that comes from learning new things that help us understand our world, and will hopefully inspire some of these great young minds to endeavor to make it a better place through science."

Topics for June, July, and August are:

Playing with Polymers with Dr. Matthew Rittler, Director, Master of Science in Biotechnology and Management at Mount St. Mary's University

What do LEGO®, milk jugs, Rainbow Loom bracelets, sandwich bags, and chewing gum all have in common? They are all made of polymers! Polymers are groups of molecules that are connected to create something tangible (something you can touch). They may be solid, squishy, sticky, bendable, or anything else you can think of. While many polymers are manmade, some occur naturally, as in the juice of rubber or aloe plants. Join us as we have fun exploring—and making—polymers!

Bones in Space with Dr. Tiziana Cavinato, Assistant Professor of Biology at Hood College

Did you know that, at eight years old, your bones grow an average of two inches per year? Even after you reach adult age your bones are continually remodeled; for example, the head of the femur is replaced about every four months! Do you know that astronauts lose about 1% of their bones per week when in space? Genes, nutrition, and exercise are important factors that influence the development of our bones. In this session, we will explore these factors and what happens to the astronaut's skeleton in the absence of gravity.

Backyard Bugs with Dr. Louis M. Huzella, Veterinary Pathologist

Have you ever wondered about the bugs that you often see in your backyard, at the playground, or in the park? Do you know which ones are potentially harmful and which are harmless? Which bugs are beneficial to the environment and which bugs might be harmful to the environment? Learn the answers to these questions and more in this informative presentation on backyard bugs.

FARM CITY CROSSROADS OF KNOWLEDGE AND DISCOVERY

Farmland and cityscape will converge at the C. Burr Artz Public Library thanks to a new educational, interactive installation for children.

Created exclusively for FCPL by The Burgeon Group and modeled after the rolling farm country and cityscapes of the county, Farm City combines the resources of the library and the knowledge of librarians with a 400-square-foot space that sparks imagination and inspires interactive, self-paced learning. Multi-layered modular panels teach basic skills and concepts through creative play and adult-child interaction. The space also includes an interactive tractor, barn, and house kiosk with panels highlighting nursery rhymes, STEM themes, and aspects of Frederick County culture.

Research confirms that the first years of life are essential to learning, and Farm City will foster such learning. “At FCPL, we truly feel it is our job to encourage all types of learning, whether it is through books, interactive play, or other means,” said Janet Vogel, Children’s Services Supervisor of the C. Burr Artz Public Library. “This space has been designed specifically to meet the needs of our community and encourage such learning.”

The space, one of the first of its kind on the East Coast, will also foster all seven domains of school readiness required in Maryland: language, math, science, technology, social studies, art, and social and physical development.

FARM CITY GRAND OPENING Monday, July 7, 11:00 am

Funding for Farm City is provided by: the Louise Lippy McMahan Trust, the C. Burr Artz Trust, the G. Frank Thomas Foundation, the Mark and Susan Butt Saturday Mornings Fund at the Frederick Community Foundation, and Delaplaine Foundation, Inc.

ON MY NIGHTSTAND

Marlene Young
President, Delaplaine Foundation, Inc.
Vice President, Great Southern Enterprises, Inc.

At any given time, I simultaneously enjoy several good books. Current fascinating reads include What Difference Do It Make? by Ron Hall and Denver Moore. This collection of real-life stories of hope and healing is written by the same two authors of Same Kind of Different As Me. They make unlikely co-authors, as one is a wealthy fine-arts dealer and the other an illiterate, homeless African American, yet they share a common bond through a remarkable woman's love that brought them together. This book showcases how Divine intervention can work through the most painful circumstances to bring forth amazing, redemptive changes, proving that one person can indeed make a positive difference in this world.

Then, having enjoyed other Sue Monk Kidd books, her latest, The Invention of Wings, delivers yet again. The plot surrounds a girl named Sarah who on her 11th birthday receives a slave girl called Handful and it begins a lifelong, complicated relationship that is a captivating story. I highly recommend this powerful book.

Guy Fletcher
Editor-in-Chief, Frederick Magazine

Throughout my career I have found that reading great writers makes me a better writer and editor. Seeing how a writer approached a certain subject or delivered a narrative in a fresh or different way is exciting and encourages me to get outside my own box when taking on a new assignment. Very often, the storytelling spirit of the books I read can be found in my own writing.

Since my background is in journalism, I particularly enjoy reading nonfiction and biography, especially about key figures in U.S. history. One of my favorite books is Robert Caro's The Power Broker, which details the life and career of Robert Moses, one of most powerful men in shaping New York City. More recently, I have enjoyed Lion in the White House, a short but exceptional biography of one of our nation's most compelling political figures, Theodore Roosevelt.

I'm also a bit of a sports nut and strongly recommend David Maraniss' When Pride Still Mattered, a biography of Vince Lombardi. Even if you have no interest in the Green Bay Packers or football or even sports, I recommend this as a textbook lesson in how to approach biography in an entertaining, revealing and powerful way.

Like many people, I purchased an iPad several years ago. Little did I know that it would not only replace my laptop when I traveled, but it also became my electronic book bag! I typically have several books that I'm reading at any given time. They can range from business related to just for fun fiction. My current reads are Flash Boys by Michael Lewis, Death by Black Hole: And Other Cosmic Quandaries by Neil deGrasse Tyson, and The Book Thief by Markus Zusak.
